Educational Objectives

This activity provides general dentists, cosmetic dentists, dental surgeons, and others interested in enhancing their knowledge of cosmetic dentistry procedures and in helping patients make informed choices about their oral health and well-being with a regular overview and critical analysis of the most current, clinically useful information available in the monthly literature covering cosmetic dentistry.

The program emphasizes controversies, advantages and disadvantages of specific diagnosis and treatment plans, including surgical options. Practitioners will also find valuable information on marketing cosmetic dentistry procedures to a largely fee-for-service clientele. Subscribers will be able to learn the science of cosmetic dentistry and, as a result, help patients separate fact from myth and make informed choices. In addition, users can expect a distinguished editorial board of experts to offer their professional experience and advice as it relates to literature topics.

After completing each program, participants should have a working familiarity with the most important information and perspectives presented, and generally should be able to apply in practice the information supplied.

Practical Reviews in Cosmetic Dentistry is a continuing education activity sponsored by the American Academy of Cosmetic Dentistry and published by Oakstone Medical Publishing. The formal continuing education programs of the AACD are accepted by AGD for Fellowship, Mastership and membership maintenance credit. Whereas continuing education hours completed through this program help meet CDE requirements of state and local associations and hospitals and clinics, approval does not imply acceptance by a state or provincial board of dentistry. This activity qualifies for CDE credits.
